Portland, April 7, 1873. STIMSON & CO. a8dtf

OREGON.

A most seasonable and abundant rain fell in the Umpqua valley on Saturday.

A man by the name of Johnson had his leg broken Saturday near Eugene.

The State Journal at Eugene is to have a new office. The corner-stone was laid last week.

A small child of Mr. Edmond Judkins, of Lane county, was badly scalded on Wednesday last.

Eugene returns taxable property for 1873 to the amount of $339,664, against $390,625 last year.

It is now positively asserted that the reported killing of a peddler near Dallas last week was a canard.

The two prisoners who escaped from the Corvallis jail were recaptured last week about eight miles from the town.

A rattlesnake was killed near Spencer Butte, Lane county, recently, that was 52 inches long and weighed 20 pounds.

M. R. Brown, Esq., has received the appointment of City Marshal at the hands of the City Fathers of Forest Grove, vice Sloper, resigned.

John Elden, formerly from Yorkshire, England, aged 68 years, died at his residence in Marion county, 13th instant, after a protracted illness.

There is a sort of distemper prevalent among the horses of Corvallis now. Some pronounce it the epizootic, while others contend that it is only "bad colds."

The regular yearly meeting of the Presbyterian Church of Corvallis was held last Thursday evening. Dr. J. B. Lee, Thos. Graham and Jas. A. Yantis were elected Trustees, and Calvin Hannah, Chorister.

A Democratic paper up the valley says: "We are out about $160 on the Greeley campaign for election tickets, club notices, hand bills, etc. The total amount collected during the canvass by us was $2 50."

At the last meeting of the Board of Directors of the State University at Eugene, Judge Thompson tendered his resignation as President of the Board and as Director, which was accepted, and Judge Walton was elected to fill the vacancy.

Mr. William Monroe, a member of the last State Senate from Wasco county, died at his residence near Bridge Creek Postoffice, on Sunday, May 11th. Mr. Monroe was a clever old gentleman, and his many friends will be sorry to learn of his death.

The Farmers' Club at Cresswell, Lane county, has elected officers as follows: President, S. B. Jackson; Vice President, N. A. W. Howe; Secretary, R. Knox; Treasurer, P. C. Noland; Executive Committee, John Bucy, John Morse, G. W. Rinehart.

The Independent says: "Professor A. J. Anderson has tendered his resignation as a member of the State Board of Examination, because he has not been able to approve the course taken by the State Board of Education in recommending a list of text books for adoption by the County Superintendents."

At a regular meeting of Excelsior Lodge No. 9, I. O. G. T., in Corvallis, held last Monday evening, W. B. Carter and Miss Emma Boswell were elected Representatives to the Grand Lodge, which meets at Albany the second Tuesday in June. Dr. John Boswell and Miss Estella Glass were elected as alternates.

The wagon road from Pioneer to Newport is completed for about two-thirds the distance, and every exertion is being made to finish it at once. Assistance is asked, and several gentlemen in the vicinity have promised substantial aid. The completion of this road will open up direct communication by land between Corvallis and the seaboard.

The Eugene Guard has this: "Persons in Siuslaw Precinct report that several bands of Indians, supposed to be from the Siletz Reservation, have passed through their neighborhood, going south. It is also reported that an Indian known as 'Siuslaw John,' who was the unhappy possessor of two squaws, has killed the old one and left for parts unknown."

The wool growers of Douglas county are to hold a convention at Roseburg on Saturday the 31st of this month, to take into consideration the propriety of forming an organization to hold their wool for fair prices or ship direct to New York or Boston markets. From twenty-five to thirty cents a pound is the minimum price that the leading wool growers of Douglas county will take for this year's clip.

The amount of appropriations made by the last Legislative Assembly in this State foots up $1,114,385, and yet the following clause is found in our State Constitution: "The Legislative Assembly shall not loan the credit of the State, nor in any manner create any debt or liabilities, which shall singly or in the aggregate with previous debts and liabilities exceed the sum of fifty thousand dollars."

The Eugene Guard says: "The wool market this spring does not open as briskly as last year. The ruling price promises to be from 20 to 25 cents per pound, against 50 to 56 cents one year ago, and with no great demand at that price, even. The amount of wool grown in Lane county this season will fall far short of the clips of former years, by far the largest portion of the sheep having been taken east of the mountains last year and the [illegible] year before."

Wright Post No. 5, G. A. R., was organized on the 15th instant, at Masonic Hall, in Eugene City, by C. P. Crandall, Department Commander, with fourteen charter members. The following officers were chosen: Post Commander, Wm. J. Shipley; Sr. Vice Com., Fred. H. Kinsey; Jr. Vice Com., F. B. Mason; Adjutant, D. E. Rice; Quartermaster, J. C. Church; Surgeon, J. P. Gill; Chaplain, F. Harrington; Officer of the Day, F. Singer; Officer of the Guard, J. D. Myers; Sergeant Major, R. M. Robinson; Quartermaster Sergeant, H. Harrington.

At a meeting of the Commissioners of The Dalles and Sandy Wagon Road, held at the Umatilla House, Dalles City, May 12, 1873, Mr. D. Monnastes was appointed a committee of one, to confer with the Governor, Secretary of State and Commissioner of Swamp Lands of the State of Oregon, to ascertain the availability of the funds of the appropriation for The Dalles and Sandy Wagon Road and to report at the next meeting. J. M. Marden was appointed Superintendent of Construction of the road. The meeting then adjourned to meet at the Umatilla House, Dalles City, May 22, 1873, at 8 o'clock, P. M.

O, the "cheek" of these bloody New York detectives! An insurance agent in New York city wrote one Carl Frank that a Mme. De Lorne knew that F.'s wife had poisoned her former husband, Mr. Eichler, and would tell all she knew to the police if she were not paid $20,000. Frank communicated with the lynx-eyed detectives. He offered Reimann $5,000 instead of $20,000, which the latter accepted. The lynx-eyed detectives prepared the money—$30 in good and $4,700 in counterfeit notes. This package F. handed R., securing from the latter a written promise to the effect that Mme. De L. should be sent to Germany. Then the minions of the law pounced on Reimann, and now that insurance agent is arraigned on charges of black-mailing and passing counterfeit-money!

THE TERRITORIES.

Hon. S. Garfielde has assumed charge of the Custom House at Port Townsend.

There are sixty-four Huntingtons in Cowlitz county, all of whom are farmers except two.

The Assessor of Cowlitz county returned $712,519 worth of property, but the Commissioners cut down the assessment figures about one fourth.

The barkentine C. L. Taylor, 367 tons, has been chartered to load lumber on the Sound for Port Chalmers, New Zealand, at £6 per 1,000 feet.

A little son of the late Mr. Ezra Durgen, of Vancouver, met with a serious accident last Friday, dislocating his ankle and breaking his leg below the knee.

Two young ladies who were fishing in the Skookum Chuck last week, fell into the stream, but it was not deep enough to drown them. One was a Portland girl.

A Postoffice has just been established at Palouse, in Whitman county, W. T., and Jesse Davis is its master. At Arcada, in Mason county, there has been a change made in the keeper of the Postoffice; Mr. Jos. Heuston being the happy man to receive the last appointment.

The schooner Flying Mist, on her passage to the Shumagan fishing grounds from Kodiak, lost two men overboard; one was John Moulton, a fisherman, the other was Abram Chutes, late mate of the bark Legal Tender. Another man, name not ascertained, was lost while attempting to cross in a dory from Falmouth Harbor to Unga.

The Kalama Beacon says: "Mr. George D. Shannon and one or two other of our citizens, started a few days ago to some locality down the Sound, where a quicksilver lode (cinnabar) is reported to be 'had for the taking.' We believe that if the quicksilver don't 'pan out' to suit them, they are intending to prospect for an anthracite lode, and 'sich like.'"

A letter from Kodiak, Alaska, says: "Don't smile when I tell you we are reviving the important industry of shipbuilding. Our efforts do not yet extend to anything as big as the Great Republic, but they comprehend navigable crafts suited to our local wants. The Russian ship carpenters who were formerly employed by the Russian Commercial Company remain here, and they are skilled workmen. A schooner of eight tons, named the Nena (after an Aleutian beauty), has been launched for Mr. Shirpser, and another, of twenty tons, is now being built for the Shirpser brothers. These with the Petaluma, a small schooner from San Francisco; will constitute, in part, the fleet of Kodiak. The Alaska Commercial Company own one or two schooners also, which trade from here around the islands and along the coast."

The Olympia Courier of the 15th inst. says: "The officers of the Territorial Woman Suffrage Association met on Tuesday, May 14th, the President, Mrs. Giddings, in the Chair. Mrs. C. E. Sylvester was appointed Secretary pro tem. Mrs. Giddings opened the meeting with a brief address, stating that the object was to consider the propriety of calling a general meeting of the Territorial Association, not later than the first week in June. Mrs. Duniway being called upon, said that she was ready to assist, and would answer for the Oregon Woman Suffrage Association that it would be glad, as far as possible, to co-operate. On motion the meeting adjourned to meet again at the home of Mrs. Giddings on next Tuesday evening, when it is expected that the exact time of holding the Convention will be decided upon.

The Boise City correspondent of the Mountaineer, under date of May 2d, says: 'There was a mass meeting held at the Court House on Tuesday evening, the 29th ultimo, for the purpose of organizing a company of militia for protection against anticipated Indian troubles. Acting Governor Curtis presided, and the meeting was addressed by most of our oratorical talent. A committee was appointed to enroll names for a military company—with what success, I have not learned. Indians along the Payette and Weiser rivers, and in the Fort Hall country, are reported to be bold and saucy. Along the Upper Weiser they amuse themselves by throwing down fences, burning hay stacks, and in some instances, devastating farms. Fears are entertained that there will yet be serious trouble with the Indians in Idaho."

The Alaska Herald of May 9th says: "The first vessel built in Alaska of which we have any account, was the Fenic. She was built by Baranoff in 1791, in Chugach Gulf, but was not launched until 1794. She proved an unlucky craft, and took to the bottom of the sea in 1799, not only her officers and crew, but Bishop Joaseph and a number of priests who were making a passage in her. From 1791 to 1817, about thirty coasting vessels were built, and subsequently the Russian American Company occasionally gave employment to its ship-carpenters, though the industry never assumed any great proportions. Since the cession there has been little shipbuilding done, but during the past year we have heard of a few small craft being built at Kodiac. There is without doubt the best timber—yellow cedar—in Alaska to be found for the purpose on the globe."

The Salt Lake Daily Tribune recently pitched into some gentlemen for alleged frauds concerning the sale of mining stocks, whereupon these accused gentlemen threaten to sue for libel. Thereat the spunky Tribune says: "We learned yesterday that we are to be sued by Major Wooley of this city for libel, the Major placing the amount of damage sustained by him at $30,000, and estimating the costs of suit at about $25,000 more. We are glad to know that we are considered good for such a sum, and when it is considered that there are three other parties, each of whom cannot consistently estimate his damages at less than the Major, we begin to feel that being sued for $420,000 is something worth living for, and is probably the 'tide in our affairs' which will lead to fame and fortune. We have never in our fondest anticipation of the future of the Tribune expected to be thought worth near half a million, but then as journalistic greatness is to be thrust upon us, we accept the situation.

A story with a moral: A gay and festive conductor on the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, recently had a Wisconsin school marm on board of his train. Instead of contenting himself with collecting his fair passenger's fare, the wicked conductor planted four kisses on her rosy lips vi et armis; for which quadrilateral osculation the enraged Wolverine has brought suit against her mischievous conductor for the sum of four thousand dollars. A thousand dollars for a luxury so evanescent in its nature, is a large price. Perhaps is would be well for the conductors on the C. & N. R. R., if they would confine themselves strictly to the letter of their official duties.

Budd Doble, a sporting character who is well known throughout the United States as the trainer of "Goldsmith Maid," has just distinguished himself by leaving San Francisco with another man's wife. Mrs. Snyder is the name of the erring one. She is said to be quite as fast as "Goldsmith Maid."

The Cincinnati Enquirer is speaking of an Ohio legislator: "J. McLean Smith is the ladies' favorite. They like his soft, goggle-eyes. He is a generous gentleman. He gave a poor soldier five cents to buy a wooden leg with last winter.

From Wisconsin we hear that Senator Matt. Carpenter has gone to Washington to urge the claims of Senator Howe to the vacant office of Chief Justice.

By Overland Telegraph.

EASTERN DATES TO MAY 18.

WASHINGTON CITY.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The Internal Revenue receipts for the present month have reached nearly $7,000,000, and the receipts of the fiscal year to date are over $100,000,000. It was estimated that the receipts for the present fiscal year will be $110,000,000, and the probabilities, judging from receipts of the past month, are that receipts of the year will exceed the estimate by from three to four millions.

The Senate Committee on Transportation Ask for Light.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Under direction of the Senate Special Committee on Transportation Routes to the Seaboard, blanks for information regarding the Pacific coast have been completed, and Senator Casserly has them in charge. He and Senator Mitchell of Oregon have been appointed a sub-committee for that purpose. These blanks are to be filled with the average current price of wheat and wheat flour at San Francisco each year from 1853 to 1872, inclusive, and the average rates of freight on wheat from San Francisco to the Atlantic ports of the United States and to ports in Europe, from 1856 to 1873. In order to arrive at a correct comparative statement of the prices of wheat at various points in the United States and in foreign countries, it is necessary that prices of the same grades of wheat should be determined at the various points to which reference is made. The prices, description and class known to the trade at San Francisco are therefore desired, and such information as will lead to a comparison between prices of the grades and grades of wheat which are recognized in trade at New York, London and Liverpool.

The Railroad Credit Mobilier Suit.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The Attorney General and Government have agreed not to give any parties a copy of the bill in equity to be filed at Hartford against the stockholders of the Credit Mobilier, until it shall have been filed in court.

Recruit to the Immortal Few.

Senator Casserly has sent a check to the Secretary of the Treasury for his back pay as a member of the 42d Congress.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Following is the letter of Senator Casserly to the Treasury Department enclosing a check for the amount of his back pay under the salary increase bill:

SIR: I send herewith indorsed to your order, the proceeds to be paid into the Treasury, the draft of this date of the Secretary of the Senate for $9,794 received by me from him, as being the full amount coming to me under the law giving to members of Congress increased pay. If I add a word, it is that what I do may not be construed to the prejudice of others. For reasons which I deemed sufficient, I voted against the provision for the increase of salaries at every stage of the bill, not excepting the final one, the adoption of the conference report. Those reasons embraced several objections to the measure, of which that in the increase of back pay was but one. They had little if any reference to pay in the future. Having so voted throughout, I find it more satisfactory to myself personally to decline the amount to which I am entitled as increased back pay. In taking this course I would not be understood as reflecting in the least on members of Congress who see their way clear to the adoption of the opposite course. Many of them are so well known to be honorable and disinterested men in their public and private life by those who know them best, as to make it impossible for me, at least, to impugn their motives or deny their good faith. Very truly,

(Signed) E. CASSERLY.

A la Mode Octosyllabic.

"Since the Modocs concealed in their lava defy
Our troops' metallurgic conchology,
Let science," said Jones, with a wink in his eye,
"Extract them by Modocimology."

"That is clever," said Brown, "and I would not be thought
To care what mode doctors barbarians;
But fear, ere they're either extracted or caught,
They'll all be Modoctogenarians."

The San Juan Island Murder.

PORTLAND, May 17, 1873.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

In your issue of the 17th inst. I—with much grief—noticed a telegram from San Juan Island, W. T., bringing the melancholy intelligence of the brutal murder of Mr. H. Dwyer and his estimable young wife, the perpetrators of this atrocious deed being, without doubt, those hostile Hydah Indians of British Columbia, these wretches having made repeated threats to attack our citizens there and endeavor to drive them away from their pretty homes where they have spent so many years of hard and weary toil; their object in attacking the settlers being to regain their old fishing grounds around the island, which they held at one time, but the island and grounds having been ceded to the United States, they are consequently shut out from this privilege, being "King George" men, and thus are taking their savage revenge. It was but a few months since that this savage tribe murdered a feeble old man within a mile or two of the place where this last dreadful murder was perpetrated.

The last two who have fallen victims at the hands of these merciless savages, had but a little time ago united in married life, located a claim on the island, and, with cheerful industry, were working, side by side, improving their little home. Mr. Dwyer was one of the most worthy and respected citizens of the island, and his wife a most amiable and Christian lady. These fearful atrocities, repeated so frequently by these hostile Indians who range in large numbers very near to San Juan Island, prove, undisputably, that the lives of the citizens residing there are much exposed, and were it not for the military force of American troops stationed there, the people would have to abandon their claims and seek for new homes. After the murder of Mr. Fuller, a few months ago, the citizens sent a numerously signed petition to the late Brigadier General Canby, praying that a military force be permanently stationed at the garrison for the protection of life and property. A short time before the writer left San Juan Island for Portland, five northern canoes filled with these savages landed on the beach, with the war paint smeared on their greasy skin, and other rude appendages, indicating hostilities. The officer in command ordered them off, but they paid no attention to it. He then ordered a detachment of his men to force them off. As they approached, the glisten of bayonets scared them, and they made tracks double quick.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

The Daily Oregonian.

MONDAY MORNING, MAY 19, 1873.

Senator Mitchell as a Great and Truthful Man

We had not intended to notice Mr. Senator Mitchell's serenade speech any further. But the Bulletin of last Saturday devoted a long editorial article to a rehash of the stale slanders hatched up by its editors and others whom Mr. Holladay hired last fall to defame the character of every man who did not believe it was best to send to the Senate of the United States from Oregon Hon. J. H. Mitchell, who was then and had long been understood as the most servile tool of Mr. Holladay, from the time of that individual's coming here as a played-out adventurer from California to the day when he received a majority in the Legislature by such means as no honest man, even in the politician's sense of that term, ever yet consented to use or to allow used. The terrible passion into which the Bulletin has worked itself, is occasioned by the remark we made some days ago that if Mr. Mitchell, in order to secure the removal of men from office who did not support his fraudulent schemes, told Grant, as he is reported by the Bulletin to have said he did, that these men "had conspired and combined with the Democratic party to defeat the choice of a majority of the party with whom they pro[illegible] to [illegible]" he told Grant "as much falsehood as could be compressed into so small a space." Mr. Mitchell knows that what we [illegible] is true; and so does the man who, while drawing a large salary from the Government as a Collector of Customs, occupies the position of assistant editor on a paper owned and run by the principal owner of the ships that come to this port, and devotes the time for which the Government pays him, partly to writing articles for that paper, at the instance of the ship-owner and his instrument Mitchell, [illegible] and vilifying all who refuse to bow the knee to his master, and partly to [illegible] up and down the country, dead-[illegible] by Holladay, and begging two bits [illegible] a half dollar [illegible] to [illegible] Holladay [illegible] going the road all his [illegible] in this [illegible] ly to travel. We may remark, parenthetically, that if the Collector of Customs and assistant editor of the Bulletin, who draws monthly salary from the Government for work which he does not perform, has as good a chance in begging for Mr. Holladay as he had for him [illegible] when he begged that a subscription be taken up to enable him to go to Washington to beg an office, he may be able, at least for some time, to [illegible] the organ grinding. Success to the [illegible]!

[illegible] who occupies such a position [illegible] of the steamships coming to [illegible] it is not necessary to [illegible] law with the greatest [illegible] our game just now, and we bid him [illegible] and return to Mr. Senator [illegible] speech, delivered at the residence of his [illegible], on the evening of his [illegible] from Washington. Every intelligent [illegible] in this State [illegible] that the [illegible] by [illegible] of the [illegible] he had in the Legislature was obtained [illegible] of [illegible] like the [illegible] Multnomah [illegible] who [illegible] counties, and [illegible] by a coalition [illegible] Democrats and a [illegible] driving of [illegible] from the primaries; and second, [illegible] of [illegible] whose nomination and election [illegible] that they would oppose to the bitter end the Holladay [illegible] for the Senate, and who could not have come [illegible] vote but [illegible] Mr. Mitchell [illegible] the choice of a majority of the Republicans of this State for United States Senator when, in 1866, he went into a Republican caucus as a candidate, and being [illegible] by Governor Gibbs, entered into a [illegible] to so [illegible] that gentleman's defeat [illegible] in doing so; he was not the choice of anything like half the party [illegible] by a [illegible] of villages and frauds unparalleled in the history of Oregon, he assumed [illegible]; he is not the choice of [illegible] of the party to-day; and if the [illegible] public [illegible] shall continue to set against him [illegible] as it has heretofore he will not be the choice of anybody in two [illegible] except the little ring who live on [illegible] he and his [illegible].

As to the charge of any [illegible] which he [illegible] against those who could not sanction [illegible] he knows [illegible] he [illegible] No [illegible] with [illegible] or [illegible] Mitchell and his friends; and if such [illegible] by [illegible] was [illegible] the [illegible] withdrawal of Mr. Mitchell's [illegible] leaving the field to him, made it [illegible] for him to use his allies. [illegible] Mitchell, as well as his rival, [illegible] all the [illegible] volunteerily come [illegible] doubt, because [illegible] of them as possessing [illegible] that Mr. Mitchell was particularly averse to receiving this class of support, it is evident from the fact that he not only did receive the vote of a Democrat, but [illegible] in caucus at different times. We refer to [illegible] Representative Johnson, of Grant, who [illegible] nominated and elected as a Democrat. But we do not believe Mr. Mitchell made any [illegible] to the Democracy as a party to secure [illegible] the [illegible] and it is but just [illegible] we say so; we know his rival absolutely [illegible] to make any such promises or concessions, and it is but truth to say that is so. [illegible] whole story is a fabrication and a falsehood. Mr. Mitchell knows that it is so, and every man in his ring knows that it is so.

While we are on this subject, we may as well [illegible] attention to another feature of this [illegible] speech of Mr. Senator Mitchell. It is [illegible] a matter that anybody cares much about, perhaps, and yet it has been made the [illegible] of remark by many persons. We allude to the manner in which Mr. Mitchell, with his little half mouth of deceiving the [illegible] with misrepresentations, and sitting as dumb as an Egyptian mummy in the Senate [illegible] back, and strutting like a turkey gobbler in spring-time, up and down on the porch of the man who has owned him for so long, [illegible] himself upon his petty victory over two or three Federal office-holders whom he could not use, and therefore overthrew. We do not blame him for removing these men from office to make room for his friends. It is the way others have generally done, who have gone before him, and we would not ask that he show himself to be [illegible] to the average Senator. A man is entitled to a broad liberty in taking care of his friends, as the political world goes, and whatever others may think, we have no complaint to make [illegible] him who [illegible] this [illegible]. But it is something new for the man who has thus exercised his power and rewarded the doubtful services of his friends, to take occasion, and even make occasion, to crow over the victims. We have no idea that these men care a fig for his crowing, but the shabbiness of the performance excites universal remark. We are told that among the roughest class of people, it is considered dishonorable to kick a fallen foe. But this petty triumph of our Senator—we mean Holladay's Senator—is only another illustration of the old saying, that a very small man may be smart, but magnanimity is never shown by little minds. Senator Mitchell's crowing is the crowing of a dunghill, not of a genuine game-cock.

Representative James Brooks died rich in this world's goods, and it is a singular fact that a greater part of his wealth consisted of railroad stocks. His will bequeaths his half of the New York Express and his home library to his son; to his wife his house, horses, carriages and $100,000 in Union Pacific land grant bonds, the latter if she renounces her dower in the Express property, his real estate in Washington, $32,000 income bonds of the Union Pacific and $35,000 first mortgage bonds of the same road to his daughter Virginia. He gives $5,000 of eastern division of Kansas bonds and $3,500 of the St. Louis and Omaha Railroad bonds to his daughter, Mary Neilson, to hold free of her husband. He gives $20,000 first mortgage Union Pacific bonds to his son-in-law, Charles H. Neilson, conditional upon his defending his property against the United States or other parties, and the remainder of his property to his son J. W. Brooks. A codicil provides that his son, and daughter Virginia, pay his widow $5,000 per year.

On Sunday, May 4th, the pastor of the Seventeenth Street Methodist Episcopal Church of New York City, preached a sermon on the relation of Christian to the social and political morals of the country. The papers speak of the sermon as one of remarkable power. He declared it to be the duty of Christians to place purity and honesty in social and political matters above all other considerations, in times of peace especially, and that they could not excuse themselves [illegible] individual responsibility for the corruption that prevails in high places, by referring their action to the necessities of political parties or the demands of a corrupt social system. From the Times' abstract of the discourse, it was evidently a most able and fearless arraignment of members of the Christian churches, for the extent to which they have been in the habit of yielding their individual consciences to the demands of selfish political parties.

Mr. Stockwell is threatened with the fate of all unsuccessful brokers. In order to save himself from bankruptcy, he sacrificed the greater part of a large private fortune, and contributing a large portion of the famous Howe legacy. As he himself has expressed it, when he was at the height of his power as President of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, he was saluted by obsequious brokers as "Commodore Stockwell," "General Stockwell," etc. Now it is "that red headed cuss from Utica." Despite his misfortunes, Stockwell has retained the Presidency of the Panama Railroad Company. But a New York dispatch of the 10th inst. says that his Presidency of this road will be strongly contested at the approaching election by Rufus Williams, of Williams & Guion, English steamship men. Williams is said to be backed by wealthy foreign capitalists, who are working to obtain control.

It is said that a recent inquiry into the financial affairs of the Howe Sewing Machine Company by the Phoenix Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut, has resulted in the decision that the concern is perfectly solvent, though embarrassed. A Boston paper says that contrary to the general belief the mortgage to the Pacific Mail Company is for money loaned to buy out the Wilcox and Gibbs and other machine companies, and is not the result of Mr. Stockwell's speculations. It was ascertained that of the total capital of one million, Mr. Stockwell owns six hundred thousand, and his brother three hundred and fifty thousand. This investigation was commenced by the insurance companies of New York and Hartford in order to settle the doubt as to the safety of their risks on the [illegible] property of the concern.

The irrepressible George Francis has turned prosecutor. He thinks he has been defendant long enough, probably. His restive spirit finds the monotony of enacting in one role unendurable. He has directed his lawyer to bring a suit against District-Attorney Phelps, Warden Johnson of the Tombs, and General Hammond, for $100,000 damages for libel and false imprisonment. Train has now been imprisoned five months, and his case is not yet decided, except as to his sanity. That decision was the only one that could have been reached, although almost anything in the line of verdict is possible with a New York jury.

A few days ago counsel for George Francis Train came into court and moved to enter a nolle prosequi in Train's case. The Judge remarked that the court had not the power to do that, and asked Mr Train to plead, suggesting that if he pleaded guilty to the charge of publishing obscene literature he would at once send him to the State prison, but if his counsel presented a prima facie case of insanity he would send him (Train) to the Insane Asylum! Counsel avoided the alternative by making a motion to quash the indictment for insufficiency.

It is in such manner as this that "Philo-Fragaria," in the Farmer, discourses of the true theory of fertilization: "It is true, the land may be so enriched by manure as to induce too much foliage; nor, indeed, is the fruit so delicious as if grown in a soil with the organic and inorganic constituents properly balanced; for there can be too much humus, mould—decomposed vegetable matter—and minerals—sand, lime, magnesia, oxide of iron, chlorine, soda, etc."

"And if not, why not?"

The action of a majority of the New York board of aldermen in laying Mayor Havemeyer's nominations on the table seems to confirm the report recently published, that a combination to control the patronage of the city had been formed. Among the names submitted to the board are one or two former Democrats. It is said, however, that all the nominees are most competent, although it is hardly presumable that this consideration is of much influence either way.

Abraham Dutton, a free born citizen of the United States has brought suit against the St. Louis Times to recover $5,000 for an alleged libel published in that paper.

A Washington dispatch of May 12th, says that the appointment of Minister to Russia has been tendered Mr. J. A. Pierrepont, of New York.

A VENERABLE BOOK.—We were shown yesterday a volume that is entitled to be held in reverence both for its character and its antiquity. It [contains] the Old Testament, the Apocrypha, the New Testament and the Book of Common Prayer. This venerable book tells the story of its origin ... printed at London by Christopher Barker, ... to the Queene's Most Excellent Majestie, Anno 1599." It is in old English text black letter ... on the most substantial plan of that era, the boards being of English black oak about a ... of an inch in thickness in a cover of ... grain leather. The boards were originally ... at the inner edge with hinges, but these are gone now, and the binding therefore has but ... connection with the body of the volume ... the margin are annotations, concordances, &c, a very considerable proportion of which are in manuscript and evidently the work of some careful student of the sacred writings, who while studying took pains to make its marginal references more complete. Some of these manuscript annotations are in Latin and some in old English Script, and the ink has so faded in many places as to make the writing nearly illegible. In the back of the volume is also pasted to one of the fly leaves a ...-ipt letter partly in Latin and partly in old English Script, so faded that only occasional words and phrases can be made out, with the ... eye, though doubtless it might all be ... with a strongly magnifying glass. This letter bears date 1644, and is written on the dingy ... paper devoid of enamel, which comes down from that remote period. This interesting ..., we are informed, was sold at auction some ... ago, along with some other books belonging to the estate of a deceased person, and was ... by Mr. Chas A. Talbot, of this city, who is now the owner of it.

BASE BALL.—The season has fairly set in. On ... day the Rustlers of Oregon City came down on the Senator to play the return game with the ... Club of this city. A large crowd of admirers of the game gathered on the grounds in East Portland to witness the game, which proved to be a very one-sided. The result stood as follows:

OREGON BIBLE SOCIETY.

SERMON BY REV A. R. MEDBURY AT THE ANNUAL MEETING, HELD AT THE TAYLOR STREET M E CHURCH, SUNDAY EVENING, MAY 18TH.

Matt v 18—Verily, I say unto you, till Heaven and Earth pass away one jot, or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, until all be fulfilled

Next in point of interest and importance to God's miraculous inspiration of His Holy Word, is His wonderful care and perpetuation of it. The Bible contains the Word of Christ and law of God to which the Savior refers in the text; hence our Lord Jesus, in whom all Scripture becomes yea and amen, and by whom it has all been inspired, assures the most perfect Divine care of the Bible unto the very end in this strong language

We might suppose that if there were any danger that Holy Scripture would pass away and pass out of existence before fulfillment that danger would arise from translation and revision. Hence, it is a matter of the deepest interest to us to know how far God's hand and care have been manifest in the translation and revision of His written Word. Of course it would be impossible in this little time we have to night, to go over the whole history of Bible transcription from age to age, and transfer from language to language. Hence we will confine our attention to the English Bible, and I ask your patient hearing, while we see as well as we can by glimpses how wonderfully God gave us this Bible—for perhaps the Bible in English has been read by more people than the Bible in all other languages put together, hence the story of this Book is, in many respects, the most important of all. The Old Testament Scriptures were rendered into several different languages, both before and after the advent of Christ. But the personal ministry of Christ and His Apostles on earth gave the world the New Testament Scriptures, and the first translation from the original tongues of both the Old and New Testament of which we have any certain knowledge, was the Latin Vulgate finished by Jerome in the year of our Lord 404. During the eighth century, the Psalms were rendered into Anglo Saxon, and about the same time the Gospel of John was translated into the same dialect by the venerable Bede, as his last work on the earth. In the following century, King Alfred prefixed a translation of the Ten Commandments with a few fragments besides from the Book of Exodus to the laws of his kingdom. In the tenth century, the four Gospels were translated into English, also the Pentateuch, Joshua, Judges, Esther, and parts of several other Books. Wickliffe began to make an English translation in 1356, and in twenty four years he had completed the New Testament, while his friend Nicholas de Hereford, who began about the same time to render the Old Testament into English, had progressed as far as Baruch in the Apocrypha, when he was excommunicated and sent into exile, breaking off his translation, which however was taken up by Wickliffe and finished four years after Hereford was exiled. The labor of Wickliffe and Hereford thus began in the middle of the fourteenth century, was accomplished at a time when Europe felt the first gusts of the great Reformation storm. Hence Wickliffe is called the Morning Star of the Reformation. He translated in the face of Papal canons strictly forbidding him, at a time when Papal standards meant something. But while monks and priests were thus arrayed against him from the very beginning, God raised up friends among dukes and queens, who fearlessly defended both Wickliffe and his grand enterprise. Hence copies of his manuscript Bible were multiplied and scattered broadcast over England and Scotland as numerously and as rapidly as possible, at a time when the printing press was unknown. And one writer tells us that so great was the effect of this English manuscript Bible that a man could not meet two people on the road but one of them would be a disciple of Wickliffe. Thus, one hundred and fifty years before Luther's Reformation broke out in Germany, and almost two hundred years before the first English testament was printed, God began to excite thirst and hope in the minds of the English speaking people for personal possession and personal knowledge of his Word. Wickliffe was a man of high scholarship and deep piety, and he labored from the purest motives of love to God and man. And here we see God's hand in his work. By the blessing of God his translation began to break the wicked power by which the Romish Church was keeping the Bible away from the people. A kind of secret society sprang up in London, called the Christian Brothers, which spread itself to different parts of the Kingdom. It was organized for the express purpose of holding meetings, to hear the manuscript Bible read, and thus was a hunger and thirst awakened among the people for the Bible, which was not to be quieted until satisfied; and to awaken this desire was the chief mission of Wickliffe's translation. It was not a translation from the original tongues, but from Jerome's Latin Vulgate, and neither Wickliffe's version, nor any of the fragmentary translations that preceded it, were ever printed for circulation, and they probably brought little if any influence into our common English version.

We come now to a new era. The revival of philology in Italy in the latter part of the fourteenth century, and the discovery of printing in Germany in the early part of the fifteenth were events which God has magnified into untold importance in the spread of His revealed word. The one event led to a more thorough knowledge of the Greek language, while the other was a signal provision of Divine Providence for multiplying copies of the Bible for the hungering nations waiting to receive it. And it was a most significant Providence, one full of Divine prophecy, that the first book ever printed by moveable metal types was a Latin Bible. In 1497, the learned Erasmus went from Holland to England. To his great joy he found kindred spirits among English scholars, men as eager as himself for the study of the Greek. In 1516, he published a New Testament in Greek and Latin with notes. This made him many friends and many enemies. The obnoxious little book was excluded from one college in Cambridge altogether. But here was a new start for Scripture revision in Old England and the very next year a bishop founded Corpus Christi College in Oxford, endowing two professorships of Latin and Greek, and making special provision for the use of the best Greek text books, and thus as early as 1517, in one English University at least, the study of the Greek language was placed in a relation commensurate with its importance and fixed upon a permanent basis. The Hebrew had not been neglected. Many manuscripts in this language were scattered over the Continent and throughout England. The first printed Hebrew Bible complete, appeared in 1488. In a single generation from this time, fourteen editions of various sizes had been issued. A number of Greek and Hebrew grammars and lexicons were published between the years 1503 and 1520. Such were the helps with which that remarkable genius and most laborious Christian student, Wm. Tyndale, was supplied when in very boyhood he began his great life-work at Oxford—and when with Erasmus as his Greek professor he renewed it at Cambridge in the more exclusive study of Greek and Hebrew. The fame of Erasmus drew him to Cambridge. He came from long continued and well improved opportunities, and brought to his work a rare critical culture and a most self exacting Christian conscience. And now with old Hebrew manuscripts and new Hebrew Bibles, with the best Greek text books within his easy reach, with his most laborious habits, and more than all this, his ardent love of God's pure word, and earnest purpose long cherished to put that word into the hands of the common people of England, a purpose sustained and developed by a faith proved by subsequent events to be more than a match for opposition and discouragements—hardly excelled in the experience of Elijah or Paul, under such circumstances the man chosen of God to do it, sat down to pioneer a translation of the Holy Scriptures, directly from the original tongues into the English vernacular. Genius, student, scholar tho' he was, he was more than all these a true Christian, in full sympathy with God's humblest children. Hence he was burdened with the importance of laying aside the technical phrases of the schools, which are ever so ambiguous to the masses, and he brought to his task an unalterable determination not only to obtain a Bible in the English language, but in such English as should be full of its own native sweetness in cottage and palace alike. When Tyndale came upon the stage the Romish Church was no more friendly to scripture translation than she had ever been. Jerome and Wickliffe, and every translator before him had been persecuted. Rome had been greatly annoyed in England and Scotland by the manuscripts of Wickliffe, and more than a hundred years before the following Papal bull had expressed the determination of Rome towards Wickliffe's Bible, and the whole work of translation. "We decree and ordain that no man hereafter by his own authority translate any text of scripture into English or any other tongue, and that no man read such translation made in the time of John Wickliffe or since or hereafter to be set forth publicly or privately, upon pain of the greater excommunication" And then had not Rome fresh reason for her hate and dread of the Bible when Tyndale appeared? Had not that pestilent fellow, Luther, just bolted from her communion, and stirred all Europe into rebellion against Papal despotism, and all because he had found a Latin Bible and read it a little. How then could Tyndale, priest though he was, expect to find favor with the most bitter foe God's Bible ever knew on the earth—the Church of Rome. He appears to have sought favor here at first, but he soon found that his cherished purpose put him into most radical antagonism with the priesthood and Papacy. And then the lofty independence of God's chosen apostle of the English Bible stood out in its true grandeur. When the debauched priests clustered together in the ale houses and stormed against him, and the Chancellor of his diocese began to make his hate manifest, then Tyndale gave them his opinion thus. Says he: "They had rather have a thousand books put forth against their abominable doings and doctrine than that the Scripture should come to light, which thing only moved me to translate the New Testament, because I had proved by experience that it was impossible to establish the people in any truth, except the Scripture were plainly laid before their eyes in their mother tongue, that they may see the order and meaning thereof. For else, whatsoever truth is taught them these enemies of all truth quench it again with sophistry and traditions of their own making. Another utterance about this time shows us how high Tyndale's love of God's truth and love of mankind had risen above Popish bigotry. He was providentially thrown into the company of a celebrated priest, and their conversation was about getting the Bible into English. The two were naturally upon opposite sides of the question. The discussion waxed hot. After a while the Romish zealot broke out with the exclamation, "We were better to be without God's laws than the Pope's." Tyndale could bear no more, and he replied, "I defy the Pope and all his laws. And if God spare my life, before many years I will cause the boy that driveth the plow to know more of the Scripture than you do." A prediction that was most literally fulfilled in less than a generation. But of course Tyndale could not stay long in one place and openly avow such sentiments as these. The Papal bloodhounds were soon put upon his track. In 1522, he was compelled to flee to London. Here God gave him the friendship of Humphrey Monmouth, a London Alderman, in whose house he had a home for nearly two years. While in London, he appears to have avoided recognition for obvious reasons. Twelve years had now passed since he commenced his task with Erasmus in Cambridge; his translated Testament was nearly ready for the press, but, as he tells us, and as we can well understand, there was no chance in all England to publish it; hence he went to Hamburg in 1524, where he published the Gospels of Matthew and Mark. One year later we find him in Cologne, getting the first complete English Testament through the press. He had not proceeded far, however, when the interference of persecution compelled another and a hasty removal to Worms. Four years previously Luther had come to the same city to receive his trial, and to carry away his memorable triumph from the famous "Diet of Worms." But at the time Tyndale took refuge here, though so short a time had elapsed, yet, according to papal testimony, "The city was under the full rage of Lutheranism." Tyndale having brought hither all his printed sheets, soon finished the quarto Testament, the printing of which he had begun in Cologne, and he also published, simultaneously with this, an octavo. Both editions were sent into England in 1526 of only two years after he left London, and four years from the time he had been driven from Cambridge. But, you ask, how could an English Testament, already proscribed by severest prohibition in Church and State, translated by a man an exile from his country and excommunicated from the Church, how could such a book be welcomed in England? The question requires a twofold reply. It was both welcomed and rejected: welcomed by a few truly Christian scholars and the people for whom it had been prepared, and most fiercely rejected by the Romish Church and government that had so much dreaded its coming. A royal agent had been on the continent, dogging the zealous Tyndale and his two amanuenses from city to city during the two years of his toil before the books were ready to ship. The Testaments, when published, were contraband goods, and the ship owner and master who would undertake to bring them to England ran the risk of losing both property and life. But men were found who were willing to hazard the shipment of the books, and it was done at a time when the two chief watch dogs of Popery—Bishop Tunstal and Cardinal Wolsey—were too busy about other matters to detect and prevent it, and thus, three hundred and forty seven years ago, the New Testament, translated into the language of the English people, was distributed among them; and thus the power of God's truth got behind the throne—it got into the hands and thoughts of the people. It was pre eminently a Bible for the masses which God was giving to the English-speaking people at the hands of Tyndale. An English Archbishop, who opposed Tyndale with all his might for years, was compelled at last to pay the following lofty tribute to his translation: "Here may all manner of persons, men, women; young, old, learned, unlearned, rich, poor, priests, laymen, lords, ladies, officers, tenants and mean men, lawyers, merchants, artificers, husbandmen, and all manner of persons of what estate or condition soever they be, may in this book learn all things, what they ought to believe, and what they ought to do and what they should not do." Numerous importations followed the first. And while Tyndale was thus toiling in Germany, the mighty leaven of God's truth and Spirit was working in England, and at the very centers of learning. Thomas Bilney, of Cambridge, a scholar of commanding influence, a Doctor of Laws and Fellow of Trinity Hall, was converted to God by reading a Greek Testament. He in turn was instrumental in the conversion of Bishop Latimer and Robert Barns, all of whom became prominent workers for scattering abroad the English translation, and two of whom witnessed their fidelity by martyrdom. A priest in London, named Garret, was also heart and hand in the work. He was the first to receive a quantity of the Testaments for distribution. Of course the appearance of the English Testaments in England greatly intensified the rage of Bible haters, and drove them to redoubled efforts to destroy both the heretics and their so called heretical books. The Kingdom was ransacked from end to end, to find the testaments for burning. Every man who was implicated in the distribution of the translated Scriptures (unless he happened like Latimer to be a man of great power and authority) was cast into prison, and after a time was brought out for humiliation. This humiliation usually consisted in a degrading confession, a forced denunciation of the translation by the accused and then he was required to apply the torch with his own hands to a pile of Testaments. If he refused, his alternatives were the dungeon or the stake, and often both. Nor was Bible burning confined to England. Germany itself was scoured, and by the use of British gold the maddened Bishops sought to possess themselves of all the English translations to burn them. Nor were Bible burning and physical torment the only instruments of papal hate. Sir Thomas More was officially employed to read and write Tyndale down. More belonged to the Romish communion, but at heart he was an infidel. Thus Pilate and Herod were well united in him to crucify the Lord afresh, and he went about his task with all the dishonest zeal, of which a bad man in a bad cause was capable. He lied about Tyndale and his translation alike. Bishop Tunstal helped him. They put their lies together, and here is a specimen of their combined falsehood. They claimed to have found three thousand erroneous texts in Tyndale's translation which afterward were reduced to six words. And it was proved that these three thousand errors(?) of Tyndale consisted in putting the word repentance where Tom More and the papal crew wanted penance, instead of church Tyndale had put congregation, instead of the Romish term Priest, Tyndale had put Elder, Acknowledge instead of confession, favor instead of grace, and love instead of charity. Such were the errors of which his translation was accused, such the spirit of the manifold persecution that opposed itself to his glorious work. Thus, as many a time before and since, the wicked joined hands to fight against God, and earth from above and hell from beneath were moved to infernal alliance and plotting to prevent if they could the translation of our English Bible. In some cases the persecutors were curiously erratic. For instance, Bishop Latimer is suddenly arraigned before Cardinal Wolsey, upon what charges we are not told, though it is well known that Latimer was active in the circulation of the translated scriptures, but the Cardinal did no more than to gently admonish him and then gave him a license to preach all over the kingdom. And thus the work went forward, God overruling persecution, and making even the persecutors to further it. Tyndale continued to translate, toiling the harder as if burdened with the feeling that he had a mighty work to perform and but little time in which to do it, yet ever most scrupulous and careful in rendering each word of his translation by the simplest and best English equivalent within his reach. For awhile he labored alone. Then he employed an amanuensis. But the very year in which he sent the first shipment of Testaments to England he was joined by Fryth, a young man from Oxford about twenty years of age, in whose conversion Tyndale had been instrumental years before. Fryth was also compelled to flee to Germany for safety on account of his zeal for the English translation. History accords to him that though so young, he "was eminent in talent, a lover of learning, and allowed even by his enemies to be an excellent scholar." He became at once a bosom friend of the great Translator. With great skill in maintaining secrecy and shunning Papal spies, the two toiled on together with mighty industry for seven years, when Fryth returned to England to seal his devotion with his life, which he did at the stake in Smithfield on the 4th of July, 1533. After this Tyndale labored alone, with only his amanuensis, until he too crowned his great life work with martyrdom in 1536, being strangled at the instigation of English Bishops, and by order of [illegible] or Charles of Germany. He had toiled incessantly for fifteen years in the work of translation, and many years previously in careful preparation. In this time he had issued many editions of the New Testament, several of the later editions being careful revisions of his own careful labor. He had shipped to England probably not less than one hundred thousand Testaments during his thirteen years' exile on the continent. How soon he began work upon the Old Testament is not known; but he had finished translating the New Testament in 1525, and in 1531 he published the entire Pentateuch in English, and soon after he added the Book of Jonah. This was the last of his translation published before his death. But there is good evidence that John Rogers—who took up Tyndale's work where the great Translator left it at his death, and published what is known as Matthew's Bible—found nearly or quite all the Old Testament in unpublished English manuscripts, as translated by Tyndale. The proof is of this kind. Up to the time of Tyndale's imprisonment no other man than Tyndale and those who worked with him are known to have been at work upon an English translation excepting Wickliffe and those who preceded him. Rogers or Matthews was intimate with Tyndale shortly before his death. Those parts of the Bible which Tyndale had published were reproduced in Rogers' or Matthew's Bible almost verbatim throughout. Rogers published the entire English Bible known as Matthew's Bible, the very year after Tyndale's death. Rogers had not had time to translate the remaining portions of the Old Testament, but Tyndale had. Tyndale had at least ten years for work upon the Old Testament, while he could not have given more than six years to translating the New Testament—besides he was more familiar with the Hebrew of the Old Testament than the Greek of the New, and, if possible, he loved the Hebrew better; and in addition to this for seven of the ten years in which he must have been at work on the Old Testament, he had the help of his friend, the talented young Fryth, and then Rogers fully recognized Tyndale as the Translator of all the Bible he published, when he put W T. in large letters at the Close of the Old Testament. But we cannot dismiss Tyndale without a glance in review of his life and times. He performed his mighty task amid the surgings of one perpetual ecclesiastical storm. Never once in all the time of his labor were the winds and billows of religious persecution at rest in Europe. His career began and ended during the eventful reign of Henry the Eighth; but until within two or three years of Tyndale's death, the lustful king was an obedient Son of the Pope, and when at last Henry set up a Church on his own account, he hated Tyndale and abhorred real experimental Christianity more, if possible, than the most bigoted Romanist; hence Tyndale found no favor, but persecution, at the English Throne, and personally he derived no other advantage from the quarrel which finally developed into a permanent breach between Henry and the Pope. Two or three powerful agents of Rome, with the Royal treasury of England at their disposal, were employed to harass the lone translator continually and destroy, if possible, both himself and the fruits of his labors. At one time, the English King makes a treaty with the German Emperor, into which is woven by artful Romish commissioners, a provision that no Lutheran books shall be printed or sold in either country. This is intended, of course, to stop the printing of the English Bible, and under God nothing but the independent charter of the city of Antwerp prevented the calamity. At another time, Old England is smitten with a royal proclamation as with a rod of iron, commanding that the New Testament translations be burnt every one of them. And this was not a mere scare. No sooner had the Bible burners obtained their commission, than they made haste to fulfill it. And so complete was the work of destruction, that of the 15 000 copies of English Testaments brought into England up to that time, but twelve can be found and satisfactorily identified now. Bilney, Bayfield, Tewksbury, Fryth, and scores of others who sought to co-operate with Tyndale, paid the penalty of their holy zeal at the stake. Even an English Queen, who had dared to favor the translation, is hunted down by the [illegible] Bishops, and her licentious husband is easily persuaded to murder her. One [illegible], who was employed by Tyndale for a short time as an amanuensis, turned traitor to the great work, and making his intimacy in labor the bulwark of his lies, he most maliciously accused Tyndale of ignorance, and asserting that his translation was seriously defective, this lying traitor Roye pretended to correct it, taking not the original tongues, but the second-hand Vulgate, as his basis of translation. Many who for a little while seemed to be zealous for Tyndale's translation, were swiftly scared by the [illegible] of Rome, and fearing public disgrace or the stake more than God, recanted, and with their own hands [illegible] the English Scriptures into the flames. But in all this God was not mocked. His Divine care was over His Holy Word, and it could not be destroyed. Not one jot or tittle of it was to pass away in all this storm of hell that opposed its translation into the English vernacular. The providence that orders and the providence that [illegible] are but twin links in the mighty chain that evermore [illegible] God's [illegible]. Thus, when in their bigoted rage against the Bible, the papal Bishops freely sent their money to Germany to buy up the translated books, that they might burn them, they were but making a market for them at high prices, and so providing Tyndale such abundant means as enabled him to multiply the books and pour them into England, among the [illegible] people. England is threatened with a famine and her ports are thrown wide open to welcome the corn-laden ships of Germany. But, as ships bring two kinds of bread to famishing England. A single ship brought five hundred English Testaments, hid away in the rye and the wheat. Other ships brought thousands of copies more. God's bread for famishing souls sent thus directly into the homes of the people. Notwithstanding one English Queen is murdered, partly because she favors the work of translation, her immediate successor dares to favor it also, even at the risk of her life. When we inquire how Tyndale is supported through years of exile and toil in an expensive work, we find around him a large cluster of English merchants, in full sympathy with him and [illegible] supplying the needed funds. And as for the prosecution and opposition encountered by Tyndale and his coadjutors, it was all [illegible] to secure the purest translation. It was well that the great translator should be cut off early from a corrupt State Church, both that he might confide more entirely in God, and that he might not be led astray by royal favors or flatteries. It was the very opposition of Rome to the English translation in the beginning that has saved the English speaking nations from the frightful calamity of a Romish Bible, instead of the Book of God. And it was needful that all who sympathized openly with the work of translation should hold antagonistic relations to the corrupt and corrupting Church and State, so that not a worldly ambition and fear of wicked men, but the fear and love of God and love of [man]kind should be their great controlling motive. It was needful that Tom More and the traitor Roye, and other shrewd unscrupulous liars, should undertake to criticise and falsely write down Tyndale's translation. False criticism though it was, how much more careful, if possible, it would make the God-fearing Tyndale and the press correctors and publishers. Then see how all these trials imposed by hate were overruled and used by God as the very furnace out of which he brought the pure gold of our English Bible. Oh, beloved brethren, God had something to do with the translation of our English Scriptures. Yes, he did it, and William Tyndale was His honored Apostle in this work. But Tyndale is strangled in 1536, and his body burned. And now what becomes of his translation? Kings and ecclesiastics have ever been compelled to yield to the will of the people at some point before they could govern. Henry the Eighth and Archbishop Cranmer were no exception to this rule. So completely had Tyndale's translations taken possession of the popular power behind the throne that two years before his martyrdom his prediction of the plough boy was fully realized, and one who went by the title of the King's scholar asserted in a Convocation of Bishops that "the lay people knew more of the Scriptures" than the clergy; and Cranmer, and Henry, and Cromwell—Henry's Vicegerent—began to consult in earnest about the importance of making an official version of the English Scriptures. Long had it been attempted to destroy the English Scriptures by burning the books and burning those who accepted them. But now for generations, with the exception of Edward and Elizabeth, the ruling powers tried to destroy this Bible by efforts to frustrate the efforts to adapt it to the uses of Papacy and semi Papacy. This consultation resulted in the employment of Miles Coverdale, ostensibly to make a translation under royal sanction. But Coverdale never made a translation from the original. He had no disposition to do it, for he says that he felt compelled to go about it because it was the royal command, hence it is probable that he had little or nothing to do with it until he received the royal command, and after that command he had no time to translate the whole Bible, nor a third of it, for in less than two years after his appointment his Bible was published. The work, of twenty years at least performed in less than two years by a man, who had no desire or disposition of his own to help him do it. No, he did not do it. This is what Coverdale evidently did: he got through his unwelcome task as easily as possible. He obtained some Latin and German [illegible] of [illegible] with these languages, and he took the English translations already made, and he revised them, but he revised them backwards, in the service of the English Pope, and he tried hard and hastily to make a Bible to accommodate Henry the Eighth. And Henry used Coverdale's Bible for certain purposes a little while. He licensed the public sale of it at first. He found the royal endorsement of this mutilated revision a very convenient help for getting popular favor in setting up his Anglican Church. But when the people found out what kind of a Bible it was they wouldn't buy it, they wouldn't have it, and eleven years later Henry himself had changed his mind, even about Coverdale's Covenant Bible. The people rejected it because there was not enough truth in it; but there was too much truth even in that for Henry the Eighth, and the English Pope proscribed it with all other translations. I refer thus definitely to Coverdale's Bible and its ultimate fate in connection with the first attempt to make an authorized version, because there is a little book being circulated among the children of this city and State to day, in which it is boldly stated that "Miles Coverdale made the first translation of the entire Bible into English." Men who can fatten on such a statement are welcome to their thrift, but for one, brethren, I bless God that he kept this Bible out of the hands of Coverdale, and gave the work of its translation to [illegible] all controlling loyalty to Christ and truth [illegible] no servile double-dealing to suit the [illegible] ence of Popes and Kings. I have already referred to Mathew's Bible which was really the Bible translated by Tyndale and published as a private enterprise, just about the time of the translator's death, by John Rogers, but published under the assumed name of Mathew's Bible, because at that time either the name of Rogers or Tyndale would have been a hindrance to its circulation. This Bible the translation of which was the result of Tyndale's great life work—became the basis of all subsequent revisions of our English Scriptures and controlled them; and so here in our common English version, we have really the translation of Wm. Tyndale. I could [illegible] to trace the history of this book through the numerous English versions, and the [three] fourths of a century that intervened between Matthew's Bible and the common version [illegible] we have not time now. I can simply [illegible] to our immediate version. It would be interesting to note now that except the regency of [illegible] and Elizabeth, how after seventy-five years of switching and wriggling among Bishops and Archbishops, Romish Kings and Queens and Counsellors, in an attempt to Romanize the English Scriptures, an English King consented at last to adopt a translation which [illegible] had been fighting against for a century, and which was adopted by the Government at last, [illegible] the English people would have and take no other Bible. And so we obtained our [illegible] Bible. True there are here [illegible] verbal changes [illegible] Tyndale's original version, but they are none of them vital changes. And we have in this book the faithful renderings of that man [illegible] called to translate the Scriptures [illegible] [illegible] Papal or [illegible] any [illegible] name to write [illegible] And [illegible] this grand old Bible, [illegible] given [illegible] God and baptized into the blood of [illegible] precious saints. And for [illegible] I say, [illegible] revise it; yes, [illegible] revise it. [illegible] good reasons for revision. The English language is a living language, and it has [illegible] changes during the last three hundred [illegible] Biblical and Philological [illegible] ought to have [illegible] rejoice that in any good [illegible] will not be [illegible] have feared. You know this translation [illegible] in the same century that gave to the [world] William Shakspeare. And how mighty [illegible] the grand Bible English of [illegible] [illegible] high average of [illegible] very simplicity will stand in a [illegible] than any English [illegible] [illegible] stop the hand of revision, [illegible] change no words [illegible] the passage [illegible] Tyndale's in the [illegible] Apostle of the English [illegible] Dr. Conant, [illegible] of translation [illegible] disregarding [illegible] of this old Bible, [illegible] translations [illegible] but they are [illegible] in justice to the [illegible] I must be silent [illegible] is often called [illegible] know any [illegible] Society, but [illegible] that Dr. C[onant] [illegible] Baptists, [illegible] don't [illegible] Baptist [illegible] that uses his [illegible] I do [illegible] Conant's version has never had the [illegible] of ninety nine [illegible] including [illegible] able for [illegible] for the [illegible] fer to stick to the old Bible, which is [illegible] the rich juice of the English [illegible] prefer this above any substitute [illegible] mistake has [illegible] it was proposed [illegible] no prophet, and I don't need to be [illegible] to predict that when the next [illegible] the light—that of which [illegible] such good things it must bring [illegible] merit in its [illegible] any English [illegible] version. ADDRESS TO THE FARMERS OF OREGON.

GENTLEMEN:—In obedience to our appointment by the State Convention of Farmers, which met at Salem on the 10th of April, we address you this circular, soliciting your co-operation in the present attempt at organization for the purpose of mutual enlightenment, pecuniary advancement, and protection. "In union there is strength," is an old and true maxim, but, at no time in the history of the world, has it been so generally applied, as in this latter part of the nineteenth century. Anciently, it was deemed appropriate in the church and state or army, but, of late years, the rule is, organization for most purposes. Individual or disintegrated exertion is accounted but little, and really amounts to but little, except as it tends toward a vigorous concentration. "ORGANIZE," is the word. If political purposes are to be accomplished, organize, if a burnt and famishing city is to be saved, organize, if a wild and uninhabited country is desired for settlement and cultivation, organize; if money is to be made or saved, if people are to be killed, or the wounded and dying to be nursed and their miseries lessened, organize; if people have anything to be given away, or ideas worth promulgating, if there is any purpose, at all, which has a rational connection with the human mind and heart, organize, and put it into successful operation. And further, organization compels organization. Combination and concentration, whether of mind or matter, for the accomplishment of a purpose, necessitate a like concentration in order to make resistance practicable. Technically considered, there are no legalized monopolies in America, and yet we have practical monopolies, by the death of competition, through the crushing power of concentration. Great companies, great corporations, and, with them, great capital, are more potent for good or evil, in the common business affairs of life, than are governments or communities. Great steamship and sailing lines on the ocean, great railway organizations upon land, manufacturing unions, boards of trade, and other great combinations of capital and brains, have compelled the organization of trades' unions, workingmen's co-operative societies, farmers' clubs, patrons of husbandry, and internationals, and still we hear the cry of the oppressed but disunited many, imploring the State and National Governments for protection.

The agriculturists of Oregon, however are strong enough, intelligent enough, and have [illegible] enough, to take care of themselves, if they will only unite in brotherly and effective co-operation. Without such union, they will continue to be, as they have been, the victims of combinations which will be more [illegible] and exacting as their capital [illegible]. There is no reason why the people of Oregon should be tributary to California, only that we are indolent enough to permit such a condition. Or, is it necessary that our wheat and wool, and everything that we sell, as well as everything that we buy, should be overhauled, wasted at our expense, and re-[illegible] to augment the already overshadowing capital of San Francisco. The people who consume our wheat give credit to California; those who manufacture our wool say that it came from California; while the [illegible] products pass to the detriment of O[illegible]. It is useless to expect fair prices for our products or to obtain goods at a fair profit, so long as we pass them through the [illegible] of the merchant princes of our sister State, [illegible] either consume what we wish to sell, or manufacture what we wish to buy. Neither can we hope for a material reduction of [illegible] so long as this state of things [illegible]. For the ship which brings our foreign goods from the home ports leaves them in San Francisco to be reshipped, and they [illegible] to us "in billet," upon which (indirectly) we pay freight, as also upon the [illegible] soon after brought by the California line of steamers.

At present, there are, indeed, alternatives; the [illegible] to pay freight, indirect, on ballast, or to [illegible] wheat to be resold in California [illegible] ruinous to the farmers of O[illegible] either of them is as sensible as it would be for the farmers of California to sell th[illegible] in New York, to be re-shipped to [illegible]; a thing which, be it [illegible] to their [illegible] have not done. They have direct [illegible] with England, as well as New York and their surplus wheat is taken directly to the market for which it is intended, thus saving the expenses of all intermediate [illegible] exchanges. The lumbermen of [illegible] a direct trade with foreign countries, and they build, freight, and man their own vessels. Th[illegible] is not a port on the Pacific [illegible] and not many in Europe, where these stanch, [illegible] do not drop anchor and exchange their lumber for coin or such [illegible] articles as they need at home. They are [illegible] so good as to take everything to New York for re-shipment, thus giving an [illegible] to the merchants of that great city.

True economy, the world over, consists in saving unnecessary waste and expense, and why should not the people of Oregon, as well as those of other States, conduct their business [illegible] to the well-known rules of economy? The people of this State consume goods [illegible] of the retail dealers, who bought [illegible] of the Portland merchants, who bought [illegible] of the New York merchants, who, in [illegible], bought them of the Liverpool [illegible] who purchased them of the manufacturer who employed men that were fed upon [illegible] wheat, which had passed through the [illegible] of the English capitalist, the California [illegible], the Portland capitalist, and, [illegible], other speculator; but still we talk of having [illegible] economical. What economy! Only [illegible] of the "penny wise and pound foolish." We pay six profits, amounting to [illegible] 100 per cent. upon cloth, and four profits, with freight, amounting to 200 per cent. upon wheat, so that, in effect, cloth [illegible] cents per yard is laid down to us, [illegible] counter, for $2 25 per yard, while the [illegible] pocket the difference of $1 50 per yard. To a great extent, this [illegible] the case, and the question for the [illegible] of Oregon, as well as of the other States of the Union, is, how much of it is [illegible] really avoidable?

There are other questions, such as transportation, [illegible] prices, domestic manufactures, [illegible] and solution, before we [illegible] from the ruinous effects of extortion. The cost of transporting a bushel of wheat to England is 80 cents, whereby a ship of 600 tons burthen, carrying 25,000 bushels of wheat, [illegible] $20,000 upon every load, and this amount is the cost of our English market. The same vessel can, on return, bring a load to New York, and from there a load to San Francisco, where she will ballast for Oregon, thus saving the cost of the vessel on the round trip, or at the rate of 200 per cent. per annum, while the farmer's per cent is not more than six upon the value of his farm. The fact that 16 vessels out of 22 came here in [illegible], and that the proportion will be greater when this end of the railroad is finished, is certainly very significant, and should [illegible] our most thoughtful attention.

The State Convention did not perfect a plan of organization, but the men composing it felt, more than ever before, the absolute necessity and duty of organization, in order to seek out a proper solution of all the pressing questions of the hour. What kind of an organization is left for the convention of next June to decide; and, in the meantime, the committee appointed at the last meeting will be busy gathering information that will be of inestimable value in determining the ways and means of amelioration. There is one question which the coming convention cannot overlook, that is, "Home manufactures, and consequently a home market." If we would make our own cloth, we could save transportation and speculator's profits upon WOOL, transportation and profit upon CLOTH, and transportation with profit upon WHEAT, besides being able to adopt the more successful and profitable system of mixed husbandry.

Now, Farmers of Oregon, we ask of you to recollect that "the gods help those that help themselves," and commence, at once, the organization of a club in every precinct of the State, and from that send up delegates to the State Convention to be held at Salem on Tuesday, the 10th day of next June. Whether, at that time, we enter into a compact and powerful State organization, or not, there is no doubt in regard to the permanent value of the clubs, where joint discussion and critical examination will clear away the fogs of ignorance which now envelop those questions of vital interest to the farming population. Without other organization, or any formal resolution, the clubs will produce a concert of feeling and action that will emancipate us from any evils of which we complain. Bear in mind that "the farmers' club is an educational institution which no community of progressive farmers can afford to forego," and begin to act without further procrastination.

COLEMANS EUCALYPTUS

Dr. J. S. Coleman's Compound Extract of Eucalyptus is a preparation combining all the valuable medicinal qualities of the Eucalyptus, which is cultivated in nearly every California garden for its medicinal utility, having become the household remedy for all diseases of the KIDNEYS, BLADDER and URINARY CANAL, and SEMINAL WEAKNESS. It seems to have a direct affinity for the GENITO-URINARY ORGANS and their surroundings, and cures them by its alterative, healing and balsamic properties more effectually than any other known remedy.

It is an invaluable remedy for all diseases of the mucous and serous membranes, such as BRONCHITIS, HACKING COUGH, NAUSEA DURING PREGNANCY, DYSPEPSIA, LEUCORRHŒA, etc.

This preparation is the result of Dr. Coleman's experiments with the medicinal properties of the tree in the U. S. Marine Hospital in San Francisco, in 1871 and 1872, where he had unusual facilities for testing the various methods of preparing the remedy, and its uses. It can be relied upon as certain to give the promised result, and hundreds of testimonials of its efficacy can be seen at his office, 405 Kearney street, San Francisco.

COLEMAN'S DOUBLE EXTRACT OF EUCALYPTUS is a powerful, yet harmless, febrifuge, and is a special preparation for the treatment of the malarious fevers of our interior valleys, and is warranted to cure any case of FEVER AND AGUE treated with it according to directions, while the baneful results of the usual Quinine and arsenical remedies for those diseases are entirely avoided.

FOR PHYSICIANS, Coleman's Fluid Extract of Eucalyptus in 1 lb bottles

Beware of Imitations, and take none but COLEMAN'S. For sale everywhere and by Hodge, Calef & Co., Wholesale Druggists, Portland, sole Agents for Oregon.

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES
Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary.

623 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs fully treated.

DR. GIBBON has the pleasure of announcing that he has returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe, and has resumed practice at his Dispensary, 623 Kearny street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco, where his old patients and those requiring his services may find him.

The Doctor has spared neither time nor money in seeking out new remedies, and has returned with increased facilities for the alleviation of human suffering.

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of [illegible] indulgences, or from vices absorbed into the system. Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured [illegible] and their broken down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies see that they are cured for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to DR. GIBBON, a physician who has made private diseases his special study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases, without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, and to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or [illegible] indulgence, is practiced by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flush, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, feted breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, should apply [illegible], either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this [illegible] which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G. will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove [illegible] satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco [illegible].

MARRIAGE.

Or those who contemplate marriage, who are suffering under any of these fearful maladies, should not forget the [illegible] by applying [illegible] upon them nor delay to obtain immediate relief.

DOCTOR GIBBON [illegible] and will give to each patient a written [illegible] binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

CURED AT HOME.

Patients at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Dr. GIBBON, giving a description of the [illegible] length of time the disease has continued, and [illegible], a package of medicine will be forwarded to any part of the country, with full and plain directions. By inclosing Ten Dollars in a Registered letter through the Post-office or through Wells, Fargo & Co., a package of medicine will be forwarded to any part of the Union. [illegible] strictly [illegible].

Caution to the Unfortunate.

Beware of the fraud of the quacks and pretenders who, with bogus sworn-to certificates, dupe the unwary. Some of the self-styled doctors, whose names are to be found in the daily and weekly newspapers of San Francisco and other places, are [illegible] and but one too [illegible] too work at their trade. Some are the [illegible], showmen, newspaper [illegible] etc. The only way to avoid imposition is to make inquiry—it will cost you nothing, and may save you many regrets; for, as advertising physicians in eight cases out of ten are bogus, there is no safety in trusting any of them until you know who and what they are. Dr. Gibbon does not receive people by exhibiting bogus titles, certificates, pretended patients' letters, etc. Dr. Gibbon will satisfy persons who may call at his offices of his ability to treat disease in the proper way to cure.

Address DR. J. F. GIBBON, 623 Kearney street, corner Commercial, San Francisco, Post Office Box 1,957.

REMEMBER TO PUT BOX 1,957 ON THE LETTER.

Consultations FREE.

Correspondents will please inform DR. GIBBON that they read his advertisement in the Daily Oregonian
